

CLAPHAM'S MICHELIN STARS

This year's Michelin Guide Awards took place in October and it was a great success for two Clapham restaurants.

Chef Adam Byatt at Trinity Restaurant retained his Michelin Star, which was first awarded in 2016. The Michelin Guide listing describes Trinity as 'a bright, warmly run neighbourhood restaurant. Adam Byatt's cooking focuses on prime ingredients and classic flavour combinations.'

Adam says - "when we started out back in 2006, our mission was to serve great food. It had to be seasonal, inspirational and delicious. I'm proud to have retained our Michelin star and huge congratulations to my team who make this happen every day."

The Michelin Guide created a further award category called 'Bib Gourmand,' an accolade that recognises exceptionally good food at more moderate prices.

In 2019, Trinity's sister restaurant, Upstairs at Trinity retained its Bib Gourmand award.

The inspectors said, 'Upstairs at Trinity is all about sharing the visually appealing, flavoursome and reasonably priced plates, which bring a hint of the Mediterranean with them.'

New Italian Restaurant Sorella was also awarded its first Bib Gourmand. Sorella is run by Robin Gill, the chef behind Clapham favourites The Dairy and Counter Culture. The Michelin inspectors said, 'The cooking found in Italy's Amalfi region inspired this 'sister' to The Dairy. Expect a great buzz, fair prices and enthusiastic service.'

Robin said "This is a huge achievement for the whole team. Congratulations should go to our Head Chef Dean Parker and Manager Meri Forre Gomez, who maintain consistently high standards on a daily basis."

To recreate some of Robin's dishes in your kitchen, his cookery book 'Larder' is available to purchase from Clapham Books and signed copies are available at all his Clapham restaurants.
